HARVARD CREW FAVORITE.

Middies Weakened by Loss of Two Star Oarsmen.

Annapolis, Md., April 20 .- Stiff, flawy winds which make a choppy sea are greatly marring the work of the Navy and Harvard eight-oared crews in their final practice for the race to be rowed on the Severn Wednesday afternoon. The work of the crews to-day was anything but satisfactory. However, the Crimso eight went out for spins both in the morning and afternoon, but the Middies got out for practice only in the afternoon, and their time being, as usual, limited.

Wray, the Harvard coach, stated tonight that while his men are in good condition for the race, yet the weather conditions have prevented the crew from getting a good spin over the course.

Forecasts on the race seem to favor Harvard, as the Crimsons are a big, welldeveloped bunch of oarsmen, and the average weight of the crew is about ten pounds greater than that of the Middles. It is realized that to win, the Middles not be said that the Navy eight is in good shape, although it has been at work for several weeks, because of the loss of Douglas and Northcroft, two of the strongest men in the boat. will have to row at a fast clip. It canstrongest men in the boat.

The former was compelled to quit rowing because of a fractured rib, and studies interfered with Northcroft. But, in of the adverse conditions many Navy adherents are confident that the Middles will display their usual pluck and game ness, and that they have a chance of coming in ahead.

The Harvard baseball squad, which arrived here last night, began practice on the Academy diamond to-day. The men were at work both morning and after-noon, and had the advantage of fine weather conditions. Because of the Navy-Harvard boat race Wednesday afternoon the game between the two teams arranged for that day will be played tomorrow instead, as it is desired to have morrow instead, as it is desired to have only the race on Wednesday. A second eration, a verdict of not guilty was reduced of punishment before six rounds game will be played Thursday.
